John DILLY, The ELDER, of Woodbridge, NJ

Submitted by Bob Smith

"Important first settler, name was orig. Dutch, Flanders, the French flavor leading to the suffixes "e" and "ey", which were Anglicized as plain DILL, the Anglo-Saxon; DILLA, meaning "good". DILL was corrupted into DEL and DELL in the early records, but without any entymological authority. Immigrant ancestor of all was that George DILL, who first settled at Salem, where in 1639 he had a land grant. With the 'First Settlers', there are to be found the familiar names of John BURROWS, 1637; Thomas CHADWELL ( SHADEWELL), 1637; John BURTON, 1637; Philip CROMWELL, 1648; John ELSTON (ALSTON), 1631; Thomas GRAY, 1626; Henry HAGGETT, 1642; Joseph HULL, 1637; John MANNING, 1631; Richard SINGLETARY, 1637; Richard WALKER, 1637; John WEBSTER, 1638; some of whom or whose descendants , later, become neighbors and intermarried at Piscataway and Woodbridge, NJ.

He married SARAH 1672 in Middlesex, New Jersey. She was born 1650 in Mendham, Morris, New Jersey, and died 1684 in Woodbridge, Middlesex, New Jersey.

Notes for JOHN DILLE:

John Dille, who temporarily settled on State island, was a charter member of the Puritan Colony that founded Woodbridge, New Jersey, in 1669. In the autumn of 1665, Sir Philip Carteret, who had been appointed Governor of New Jersey in 1664, published the Concessions and Agreements of the Lords-Proprietors which established freedom of religion in the new colony. This was the motivating cause for the establishment of the permanent settlements of Piscataway Woodbridge, and Elizabethtown. A signal result of the distribution of copies of The Concession in New England was the arrival in New Jersey of John Pike, Daniel Pierce, and seven associates from Newbury, Mass. They entered into an agreement on Dec. 11, 1666 where by on Dec. 3, 1667 they received from Governor Carteret and some of the Elizabethtown associates a grant of land, embracing what is now the township of Woodbridge, New Jersey. They, as the representatives of 57 families, on June 1, 1669, were granted a charter creating a township covering six miles square, named after their pastor, the Presbyterian John Woodbridge, of Newbury. Most of the settlers were from Newbury and Haverhill, both in Essex had come here with Governor Carteret by the ship Philip which had arrived July 29, 1665. The aforementioned John Pike was the ancestor of General Zebulon Montgomery Pike 1779-1813, who discovered Pike's peak, Colorado, and who was killed in the War of 1812.

The 57 Woodbridge freeholders drew for the town lots in 1669. The land had previously been laid off, and the lots varied in area from 15 to 448 acres. Some of it was upland and some was meadow. At the drawing from town lots John Dille drew a 94 acre lot on Papiack Creek, as the record states, "John Dilly with the two Pierces and several others occupied lots across the Papiac on the Upland beyond the meadows. The Pierces were prominent men in the Colony. In the above quotation John's name is given first, indicating that he had considerable standing in the community, though only 24 years old. In

He married MARY ELIZABETH WADE 1742, daughter of NATHAN WADE and MARY DAVENPORT. She was born 1728 in Maryland, Of Bridgewater, Somerset, New Jersey, and died April 13, 1826 in Washington, PA.

Notes for DAVID DILLE:

We do not know how many of his children were with David and his wife, Mary when they left their home in Morris County, New Jersey, with a group of other pioneers and crossed the uncharted Alleghenies. They must have followed the Indian Trails and natural routes that later became the Braddock and Forbes Roads. These lead to the neighborhood where they chose to settle on Ten Mile Creek in southwestern Pennsylvania, near the present towns of Prosperity and Amity. We know that their Son Aaron, who had married in New Jersey, did not accompany them but remained in New Jersey until after the Revolutionary War, when he joined his father and brothers in Washington County. We have found no record that William, Jonathan, or Sarah ever came to Pennsylvania, but records do show that their other sons and their daughter, Elizabeth, did come to the area now known as Morris Township, Washington County, PA. Some sources say that David Dille died here around 1784, but there is a record in the courthouse that David Dille and his wife Elizabeth sold property on 3/21/1793 in Washington County. This could hardly have been David jr., whose wives were named Nancy and Mary, so it is logical to conclude that David Sr. died after this date. Elizabeth Wade Dille died in Washington County in the home of her daughter Elizabeth, who was married to William Weir. Her obituary which appeared in an Ohio Newspaper stated that she was 98 years old, and left 9 children, 90 grandchildren, 364 great grandchildren and 28 great great grandchildren!

That date of this family's migration to Washington County has been set by previous researchers at about 1766. If this is right all of their children were born in New Jersey. This was the time when the colonies were violently resisting the many measures designed by King George III for purposes of taxation without representation, and the colonists felt that their cherished liberties were being threatened. The Proclamation of 1763 forbade the colonists to migrate into territory west of a line drawn along the crest of the Alleghenies. Presumably this was to avoid trouble with the Indians. The colonists, however, considered this an infringement upon their rights to settle western lands included in their original charters, and, distressed by the high cost of living brought on by the French and Indian War, they continued to migrate.

The spot chosen for settlement by the group with which the Dilles came is South of where the village of Prosperity, PA now stands, about 25 or 30 miles southwest of the point where the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers converge to form the Ohio River. It was here, at Fort Duquesne, that the first shots of the French and Indian War were fired. In 1763 the Peace of Paris gave England all the region east of the Mississippi, and in the same year the great Ottawa Chief Pontiac roused the Indian tribes and captured 10 of the 14 English frontier forts. They spread terror throughout the region west of Fort Duquesne where Pittsburgh, named for the great English statesman, William Pitt, now stands. Both of these events, no doubt, had a great influence over the lives of the early settlers in the region.

We are indebted to Jacob Parkhurst, farmer and minister, for a description of pioneer life in this region at the time the Dilles lived there. He was born in 1772, and his parents brought him to Washington County, PA in 1773. He wrote sketches of his life when he was 70 years of age. Not for speculation or honor but for the benefit of rising generations. In 1826, his son, John Henry Parkhurst, married Keziah Fort, daughter of Mary Dille Fort, who was the daughter of Samuel Dille, one of David's sons. Mr. Parkhurst pictures clearly and authentically how these pioneers lived through the Revolutionary War, exposed to the tomahawk of the merciless savage, suffering all the hardships of a wilderness country and the privations of a calamitous war.

During the summer of 1774, the Parkhursts and other Washington County settlers fortified in Enoch's Fort, about 12 miles away, leaving their small cabins and a few acres partially cleared in the dense forest, being much alarmed by the tidings of the Indians, who had crossed the Ohio River and were steering toward our frontier, of which we were about the front. With their arms and whatever ammunition they were able to obtain, the men went round in turn to each one's field and some stood guard while the balance planted or hoed their crops. Thus with much difficulty they obtained a very small pittance of provisions for the wants of their families. Their group was favored with no loss of life from the enemy that summer, and in the fall when hunting time came on, the Indians withdrew.

The settlers lived on venison and hominy with some mush and milk and some corn cakes ground on a hand mill and sifted through a splinter sieve. The common dress was row linen and dressed deer skin until 8 or 10 years of age boys had to do with one long shirt a year, which came down to the calf of the leg. They were worn into shreds, for they had to last until the next crop of flax was manufactured into linen which was done in winter. Forting was continued for many years. By 1780 there were several new forts built, namely, Jackson's on the South Fort of Ten Mile and Atkinson's on the Middle Fork of Lindsley's on the same creek. In spite of the forts there were, as time went on, many indian raids that ended in death, scalplings, and destruction of homes of the settlers. The men went on scouting parties regularly, when the call of a wild turkey might be an indian signal. The settlers, too, became expert in their tricks to mislead the Indians. This continued until long after peace was made with Great Britain, until, because of continued migration, this area was no longer a frontier.

There was another enemy which infested the new country also, that was some thing like the indians for they would hide in the grass until they got the opportunity to strike, and then run and hide. They were the rattlesnake and the copperhead. They were very numerous and had their dens in the rocks, where they wintered and would go early in the spring and slay them by the dozens.

Mr. Parkhurst wrote that, By 1792 my father was now becoming by industry and economy throughout the whole family, to be tolerably well off, for he had two improvement rights. One he made by actual settlement; the other he bought. Each would hold four hundred acres of land by paying ten pounds a hundred to the General land Office. He managed to pay the fee of one tract of four hundred acres; the other he gave a s a share to John Carmicle for clearing it out of the office. So we began to live in tolerably good style, with the rest of the farmers of the backwoods of PA.

Truly the historian, David Saville Muzzey, was right when he wrote: The frontier bred a type of settlers, who, in their struggle to subdue the wild forests and the wilder savages, became self reliant, resourceful and courageous... it developed a stark democracy. One man was as good as another, politically and socially...There was no peasant class in America. Opportunity to rise in the social scale was open to all."

A letter dated May 31, 1963, from Mrs. Florence McLivaine, Secretary Treasurer of the Washington County Historical Society PA and regent of the Washington County Chapter DAR 1935-1938, states, There were Dilles in this county quite early, but I feel sure the group came originally from Morris County, New Jersey. Our Morris ownership was almost completely settled in the very early years by people who came here from morris County, New Jersey. That is where all the early Dilles lived and where many of them live today. In the earliest official listings of 1781, PA Archives we find the following listed under the Dill name: price, John, David, Samuel, Isaac, and Caleb all married men.

Washington County was not established until 1781, and official records were not kept before this time. Virginia claimed all this area and held courts here from 1775-1790, when they withdrew. At the same time PA claimed the area, and as PA, it was Westmoreland County. As Virginia, the area was divided into three counties: ohio County, around Wheeling; Yohogania County, mainly the present Washington County; and Monongalia County, the lower part of Washington County and all of Greene County.

The western part of amwell Township became Morris Township. David Dille was the first signer of the petition to form Morris Township. Most families had migrated from Morris County, New Jersey. It was not until 1855 that Franklin Township was erected from Canton and morris Townships.

The Library of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, Washington DC records that, Caleb Dille was a private in Captain Miller's Company, Washington County, PA Militia, one of seven brothers, all served in the same company i.e. Caleb, Price, Samuel, Israel, Isaac, David and John Dille. They all served under Captain J. Miller, and he certified their class on 9-21-1781; Caleb and Price, 2nd Class; Samuel 4th Class; Israel, 5th Class; Isaac, 7th class; David and John 8th Class. The class represents length of service in the Pennsy lvania Militia.

This establishes the names of seven of David's sons who were living in this are during the Revolutionary War.

He married MRS. FLETCHER 1766. She was born 1743.

Notes for AARON DILLE:

When George Washington was still President of this new country, and Ohio was not yet a state, Aaron, Caleb,

Samuel, and John, with neighbors and friends, travelled in a southwesterly direction, taking their families with them into the wilderness across the Ohio River, and founded the town of Dille, in what is now Belmont County, Ohio. With the surrounding land of the Ohio valley it became known as Dille's Bottom. Dille, Ohio is still shown on the present maps of Ohio, although there is no longer a post office there. It is located on the Ohio River ten miles south of Bellaire, Ohio, on Highway no. 7, across the Ohio River from Moundsville, West Virginia.

In the History of the Upper Ohio Valley Vol. 11 records, Early in 1793 John Dille and Samuel Dille settled upon lands always since known as Dille's Bottom, which seems to be the first permanent and continuous settlement of which we have record. The same year Dille's Fort was built on these lands for the protection of the settlers that seemed to have increased rapidly, and the following year we have record of the killing of old man Tate by the Indians a short distance below and in sight of the fort, showing that the Indians resented promptly all efforts at this date to settle in Ohio, Tate, very early in the morning as he opened the door of his cabin to go out, was shot, and his daughter in law and his grandson pulled his body in and barred the door., and the Indians, unable to force it open, fired through and wounded the boy, and the woman was shot as she attempted to escape by the chimney and fell in the fire but the boy pulled her out and again hid. The Indians forced the door open killed the girl as they came in, scalped those they had shot and made their escape. The wounded boy, shot in the mouth, made his escape to the fort.

Notes for SAMUEL DILLE:

Excerpt from The Dille Book:

When George Washington was still Presdient of this new county, and Ohio was not yet a state, Aaron, Caleb, Samuel, and John, with neighbors and friends, travelled in a southwesterly direction, taking their families with them into the wilderness across the Ohi River, and founded the town of Dille, in what is now Belmont County, Ohio. With the surrounding land of the Ohio Valley it became know as Dill's Bottom. Dille, Ohio is still shown on the present maps of Ohio, although there is no longer a post office there. It is located on the Ohio River ten miles south of Bellaire, Ohio, on Highway No. 7, across the Ohio River from Moundsville, West Virginia. Brant and Fuller's History of the Upper Ohio Valle, Vol. II, records "Early in 1793 John Dille and Samuel Dille settled upon lands always since known as Dille's Bottom, which seems to be the first permanent and continuous settlement of which we have record. The same year Dill's Fort was built on these lands for the protection of the settlers that seemed to have increased rapidly, and the following year we have record of the killing of old man Tate by the Indians a short distance below and in sight of the fort, showing that the Indians resented promptly all efforts at this date to settle in Ohio. Tate, very early in the morning as he opened the door of his cabin to go out, was shot, and his daughter in law and his grandson pulled his body in and barred the door, and the indians, unable to force it open, fired through and wounded the boy, and the woman was shot as she attempted to escape by the chimney and fell in the fire but the boy pulled her out and again hid. The indians forced the door open, killed the girl as they came in, scalped those they had shot and made their escape. The wounded boy, shot in the mouth, made his escape to the fort."

DILLE

Broadway, about a mile and a half from the Public Square, is intersected or paralleled by four short streets, all close together. They are: Dille, Martin, Douse and Gibbs streets, all named for the members of one family whose farm of 90 acres covered not only both sides of Broadway at this point, but extended westward over the valley and across the Cuyahoga River, which winds through it on its way to the lake.

Samuel Dille, of New Jersey, said to have been a nephew of David Dille, of Euclid, and Asa Dille, of Doan's Corners, bought this tract of land in 1804 of Turhand Kirtland, agent for the Connecticut Land Co. He built for his home a log-cabin, unusually large for the times, in the upper story of which was a room extending the length and breadth of the house. In this were held public gatherings. In the Stephen Peet sketch in this work will be found an interesting account of one of these gatherings that occurred in 1814.

No one can be found who remembers or was told just where this loghouse stood or when torn down. It may have been replaced on the same spot by the large frame structure which was the Dille homestead fully 75 years ago, perhaps even earlier. This pioneer dwelling yet stands on the south-east corner of Broadway and Dille streets, and save the addition of a front porch and a change in the size of window-frames, remains as it was built. The view from the second story must have been exceedingly beautiful in the years when the river valley was clothed in verdure, the banks between and beyond covered with forest-trees, wild-flowering shrubs and vines, while, in their season, innumerable wild fowl flew by, or floated upon the river. Today clouds of smoke obstruct the view, the banks are dreary with ash-heaps and refuse, unattractive tenements swarming with old-world emigrants surround and close in upon the old pioneer home.

Notes for DAVID JR. DILLE:

David came to Washington County, PA in 1797 to spy out the land. he was a farmer and was looking for fertile soil upon which to locate, he did not find what he wanted in or near the hamlet at the mouth of the Cuyahoga and finally decided upon a 100 acre tract in Euclid. This decision would seem to have barred him and his family from Cleveland local history were it not that they sojourned six weeks in town while their log cabin in Euclid was being built and that the children and grandchildren intermarried into Cleveland families; so that David's descendants today, many of them of much local importance, are distributed over the length and breadth of the city. His brother Asa, settled in East Cleveland on Mayfield road; the nephew, Samuel Dille, on Broadway...Dille Road, which crosses Euclid Avenue in East Cleveland, is named for this family. David was a soldier of the Revolution, having served a year as Sargeant, another year as Lieutenant in the infantry, and two months with the cavalry. Until this last enlistment he was with William Crawford in the ill fated expedition to northwest Ohio terminating in the burning of Colonel Crawford at the stake by the Indians in the presence of the renegade. Simon Girty...At the age of 78 David dille, received a pension for his Revolutionary Services.

It was not until the spring of 1803 that he came west to remain permanently. He was then 50, had been married two times and the father of eight children, the oldest of whom was 22 and the youngest a babe. The family of Asa Dille, his brother, accompanied him on the journey. The wives of the two men were sisters. They rode all the way from the Ohio River near Wheeling, on horseback, each carrying an infant in her arms, with another child seated behind her, and holding onto its mother for dear life when the road was rough. It took 25 days for the wagons that contained their household effects to traverse the last 25 miles of the journey because there was no road, nothing but a bridle path, and trees had to be chopped down occasionally to make this wide enough for the team to get through.

The army record of this war hero was most unusual, Besides that of the father in the War of the Revolution was that of his three sons, Lewis, Luther, and Asa Dille, who belonged to Captain Murray's Company, recruited in Cleveland in the War of 1812, David Dille had six sons and 13 grandsons who fought in the Civil war. The five Sons of David and Nancy remained in this locality for the remainder of their lives but many of the grandchildren removed to the western states as did several of David Jr.s children by the second marriage.

Notes for ISAAC SR. DILLE:

Served for seven months in the Revolutionary Militia from Washington County, PA and on 2-10-1785 warranted 400 acres of land there on the Middle Fork of Ten Mile Branch. He named it Rabbit's Burrow. It adjoined land warranted at the same time by his brothers, David jr. And Caleb Dille.

According to the History of Washington County, PA:<http://www.chartiers.com/crumrine/twp-franklin.html>: The family of Dille, who settled in this section, were numerous. They took up lands in what is now Franklin township. Caleb Dille warranted a tract of land on the middle fork of Ten-Mile on the 10th of February, 1785, which was surveyed Jan. 27, 1786, as "Pleasant Harbor," and contained 189 acres. David Dille's warrant was dated Feb. 10, 1785. His land was surveyed Nov. 7, 1785, contained 400 acres, and was named "Fair Plain." Isaac Dille's land was warranted the same date, surveyed Jan. 17, 1785, and was named "Rabbit's Burrow." Price Dille located a tract, which was warranted March 30, 1786, and surveyed June 19th, the same year; this tract contained 400 acres, and was called "Mendicum." These tracts were adjoining each other. Ezra Dille took out a warrant Dec. 3, 1811. It was surveyed to him by the name of "Peace," and contained 55 acres. It had long been occupied by him, and he continued to live there many years after. On the 4th of April, 1814, he conveyed 50 acres to Isaac Dille. David Dille conveyed to Isaac Dille 161 acres on the 21st of March, 1793. Some of the land purchased and settled on by the Dilles is still in possession of their descendants
